1. APRA leaders are said to be pessimistic over the party's financial difficulties, and the party appears to be in increasing financial straits. The chief strain on the party treasury at the moment is reportedly rent and upkeep on some ten houses leased by APRA in various names in various parts of the city which are used for hiding party leaders who are still being sought by the government. These houses are also used for small party meetings.
2. The National Action Committee of APRA is preparing the first draft of a Manifesto to the Nation soon to be issued. This is believed to be the first manifesto to be issued by APRA on a national scale in Peru since the Aprista party was outlawed in October 1948.
